President's Reception for Visiting Churchmen Last Night.

Admiral and Mrs. Dewey Among the sonal Notes.

President and Mrs. McKinley's reception

last night in honor of the bishops of the Methodist Episcopal Church and members of the general missionary committee not only afforded these visitors to Washington a cordial official welcome, but also proved to be one of the most interesting of the hospitalities extended during the present administration to the representatives of religious bodies. The White House, just at present in spick and span condition, with its new adornments on all sides, commanding admiration, was given a festive touch by the profuse arrangement of palms and flowers in each apartment. The Marine Band was stationed in the conservatory, where the guests found many attractions. The company present was not a large one, although the special guests were reinforced

The company present was not a large one, although the special guests were reinforced by the presence of the Methodist and other clergymen of this city, as well as a number of the prominent laymen of that denomination. These facts contributed largely to the sociability of the gathering, which was probably its marked feature. In the state dining room, the general hospitality of President's McKinley's home, was in evidence. From the table, over which nodded great bouquets of white chysanthemums, a dainty collation of salads, ices, etc., were served by a large corps of servants.

The reception was practically over before 10 o'clock, as the majority of the guests came during the first half hour. Col. Bingham made the presentations to the President, who in turn introduced each guest to Mrs. McKinley, who was seated near him. Mrs. McKinley were one of her most becoming gowns—white satin brocaded in waved lines of mauve. She wore diamonds and looked particularly animated and well.

Mrs. Gage, who stood next her, never appeared to better advantage. Her gown was black chantilly lace over white satin; and numerous diamonds. Mrs. Root, wife of the Secretary of War, who was present for the first time in the White House receiving line, made a charming impression. Mrs. Root was gowned in jetted black lace and had two American beauty roses as a corsage ornament. A necklace of large solitaires was also worn. Mrs. Hitchcock wore gray satin, elaborately embroidered in steel, and many diamond ornaments. Miss Wilson, who also received, wore gray crepe de chene. who also received, wore gray crepe de chene.

Back of the receiving party in the blue room Secretaries Root and Hitchcock and Miss Hitchcock were conspicuous among the arrivals in Washington society since the arrivals in Washington society since the curtain rang down on official functions last spring. Secretary Hay, Attorney General Griggs, Secretary Wilson, Secretary Porter, Mrs. Bingham, Justice Harlan, Justice McKenna and the Misses McKenna, Commissioner of Pensions and Miss Evans, Surgeon General Sternberg, Mrs. Sternberg, Gen. and Mrs. Wilson, ex-Secretary and Mrs. Foster, Controller and Mrs. Dawes, Mr. Rockhill, Gen. Corbin, Paymaster and Mrs. Rand and Miss Griggs also spent most of the evening in the blue room.

Mr. Rockhill, Gen. Corbin, Paymaster and Mrs. Rand and Miss Griggs also spent most of the evening in the blue room.

Admiral and Mrs. Dewey were among the earliest arrivals, and during the half hour of their stay held the general attention. The greeting of the President and his wife and the admiral and his bride made a very preety scene. When they had passed down the line and were invited to join the company back of the barricade they had an ovation which must have been a pleasant and a flattering experience.

It was repeated at every point of their path to the east room, where they were good-naturedly surrounded by strangers, who compelled them to hold a reception whether they cared for it or not. The admiral made his way slowly to the north door, smilling and bowing, as did his wife.

Admiral Dewey wore his full dress uniform, and his bride made her first appearance in a gown of cream-tin' I lace, the low-necked bodice edged around the shoulders with tulle. A neck band of white ribbon and a necklace of large solitaires and a gold locket bordered with diamonds were worn, and in her hair were several diamond. a gold locket bordered with diamonds were worn, and in her hair were several diamond ornaments, fastening a diamond-tipped ai-

DIFFERENCE IN OPINION.

Commission and Inspector of Buildings Disagree.

Mrs. Mary A. Thomas, the owner of premises 11 D street, was notified some time ago by the inspector of buildings to make certain repairs to the building, the structure being deemed by the inspector to be in an unsafe condition. The inspector gave her ten days in which to make the required repairs, but Mrs. Thomas appealed from his decision, depositing the sum of $30 required by law in such cases, and asked that a commission be authorized to examine the building. That was done, and Mrs. Thomas claimed, upon a report by the commission, that it had decided in her favor, and that she was therefore, entitled to have the sum deposited by her returned to her. The matter was referred to the

to her. The matter was referred to the attorney for the District, who has sustained Mrs. Thomas' claim.

"It will be observed," says the Commissioners' legal adviser, in his opinion, "that the inspector condemned the two upper stories. The commission did not require the two upper stories to be removed, but found that the building could be made safe without the removal of either of the steries. In this the commission entirely disagreed with the inspector of buildings as to the necessity of removal ordered by as to the necessity of removal ordered by him. In my opinion the decision of the commission was not adverse to Mrs. Thomas within the meaning of the section of the building regulations referred to, and the deposit should be returned to her."

Status of an Alley.

The Potomac Electric Power Company ecently applied for a permit authorizing t to extend its conduit on 41/2 street between C and D to a pole in the alley in square 490. A question arose as to whether the alley is a private or public one, and the District surveyor reported that while it had been recorded in his office it appeared that part of the land has not been dedicated to the District. He suggested a reference of the question to the at-torney for the District, who has rendered a decision to the effect that, in view of the fact that the alley has long been used and regarded as a public alley, and as it has been extempted from taxation as such, it should be so regarded by the Commis-

Cause Obstruction.

Complaint was recently made to the District Commissioners by Reuben Andrews that the backmen occupying the stand in Mrs. Grant came in for a second ovation when she arrived, accompanied by her granddaughter, Miss Sartoris, Mrs. Grant's health has been greatly improved by her vehicles on a line with the sidewalk of required to place their vehicles south of the sidewalk line of D street, and the Commissioners have directed the police au-thorities to see that the street is not ob-structed in the future.

Suit Against Electric Company.

Suit at law to recover damages in the sum of $10,000 was instituted today by James A. Bland, through Attorneys Wilson and Barksdale, against the United States Electric Lighting Company of Washington.

It is set forth that the 20th of last Sep tember the plaintiff, being in the employ of the defendant company as a linesman's ssistant, was ordered to ascend one of the assistant, was gracified to ascend one of the poles of the company located on the east side of 13½ street between B and C streets. By reason of a boil breaking, it is charged, the plaintiff was precipitated to the ground, suffering concussion of the spine and other between B.
